5 THINGS TO KNOW

WELCOME TO METRO.US

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT, REPORTER

I've heard Mayor Bill de Blasio many times say that New York is the safest big city in America. On Tuesday, he reiterated that, and the promise to keep making New York even safer, when he revealed crime statistics alongside the NYPD for the first half of 2018. Though overall crime is at a record low so far this year, two crime categories have seen a jump in numbers: murder, and rape. Read more about those stats inside and at metro.us.

1 EX-APPLE WORKER CHARGED WITH THEFT

U.S. authorities charged a former Apple Inc. employee with stealing trade secrets on Monday, accusing him of downloading a blueprint related to a self-driving car to a personal laptop before trying to flee the country for China, according to a criminal complaint filed in federal court. The complaint said the former employee, Xiaolang Zhang, disclosed intentions to work for a Chinese self-driving car startup and booked a last-minute flight to China after downloading the plan for a circuit board for the self-driving car. Authorities arrested Zhang on July 7 at the San Jose airport after he passed through a security checkpoint. "We're working with authorities on this matter and will do everything possible to make sure this individual and any other individuals involved are held accountable for their actions," Apple said in a statement. Tamara Crepet, a lawyer provisionally appointed to represent Zhang, did not immediately respond to a request for comment. The FBI also did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

2 RONALDO LEAVES REAL MADRID FOR JUVENTUS

Cristiano Ronaldo has joined Italian champions Juventus from Real Madrid on a four-year contract for $117.34 million signaling the end of nine years at the Spanish giants filled with trophies and goals. The two European giants on Tuesday announced the much-anticipated deal for the five-times world player of the year who joined Real from Manchester United in 2008 for a then-world-record ($106 million). The 33-year-old Portugal forward is the Spanish club's all-time top scorer with 451 goals in all competitions and won two La Liga titles and four Champions League trophies with them. The signing of the latest Ballon d'Or winner and top scorer in the Champions League for the last six seasons represents a major coup for Juve, who have had a stranglehold on the Italian title since 2012 but have not won Europe's top prize since 1996. The signing also strikes a blow for the profile of Serie A against La Liga, which has now lost two of its three most famous players in the last year after Paris St Germain signed Neymar from Barcelona for a world-record fee last August.

3 SEVERAL INJURED IN MIDTOWN FIRE

At least a dozen firefighters were injured Tuesday while fighting a fire at a building near Bryant Park, NBC4 reported. According to NBC4, the FDNY said the fire started in the kitchen of the Chinese restaurant. Several firefighters suffered heat exhaustion and various other injuries.

4 OREGON RANCHERS PARDONED BY TRUMP

President Donald Trump on Tuesday pardoned two imprisoned Oregon ranchers whose sentencing on arson convictions sparked the 2016 occupation of a wildlife refuge, part of a long-simmering dispute over federal land policies in the West. The armed standoff at the Malheur National Wildlife Refuge in southeast Oregon followed a judge's ruling that sent Dwight Hammond and his son, Steven, back to prison to serve more time after their initial release. Police shot one of the occupiers dead during the 41-day midwinter protest. The takeover was another flare-up in a decades-old conflict over federal control of millions of acres of public land in the Western U.S. The leaders of the Malheur standoff, including activists Ammon and Ryan Bundy, were cleared of federal charges for their role in the protest in October 2016. Ammon Bundy on Tuesday called the pardon "long overdue." "We went up there to prevent the atrocity from happening to begin with, and if people would have listened to us, the Hammonds wouldn't have to have gone through this suffering," Bundy said in a telephone interview.

5 BILLS' MCCOY DENIES ASSAULT ALLEGATIONS

Buffalo Bills running back LeSean McCoy issued a statement on Instagram on Tuesday denying allegations of domestic violence, child abuse, animal cruelty and performance-enhancing drug use made by another Instagram user. The user posted an image of a woman with cuts and bruises on her face and accused McCoy of being responsible for the abuse. The post went on to accuse McCoy of beating his dog into kidney failure, "viciously" beating his son and using illegal steroids. "For the record, the totally baseless and offensive claims made against me today on social media are completely false," McCoy said in his response. "Further more, I have not had any direct contact with any of the people involved for months." The woman in the photo is said to be Delicia Cordon, a previously known girlfriend of McCoy's, and the poster says she's a close friend of Cordon. The Bills reportedly are aware of the allegations and are looking into them. McCoy, 29, rushed for 1,138 yards and six touchdowns last season. He's a six-time Pro Bowl selection in his nine NFL seasons with the Philadelphia Eagles and Bills.

Murder and rape up in NYC, says the NYPD

But despite an uptick in serious crimes, overall crime is at a six-month low.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

The number of murders and rapes in New York City have increased in the first half of 2018, the New York Police Department announced on Tuesday, but the overall crime rate has dropped to record lows.

Murder is up 8.1 percent citywide so far this year, but the total number of murders, 147, is still the second-lowest amount for a six-month period in the modern era, police said.

The Bronx is driving this increase, NYPD Chief of Patrol Terry Monahan said at a Tuesday news conference in the borough, with 58 homicides having occurred there in the first half of 2018 — which is 21 more murders than the same period last year. There have been 29 fatal shootings in the Bronx so far, compared to 17 by this time last year.

"We see this trend throughout the rest of city as well," Monahan said, "with 82 murders citywide this year by way of shooting, increase of 20. So our shootings are going down, but the people who have died after they were shot has gone up."

The other crime in New York City that has increased is rape, which is up 33.2 percent so far in 2018 compared to the first half of last year. The number of reported domestic rapes — historically, Monahan said, the most underreported crime — has increased even more, by 37.4 percent.

This increase is actually encouraging to law enforcement, Monahan said.

The other crime in New York City that has increased is rape, which is up 33.2 percent so far in 2018 compared to the first half of last year.

"Rape, we've always know, has often been an underreported crime — nationally, they say one of the most underreported — and we've been pushing people to come out and report it," he said. "That's one crime that when it goes up, it's actually a good thing, because more people are coming forward."

But it's not all bad news. Overall crime across the five boroughs is down 1.8 percent compared to the first six months of 2017, and the NYPD also made 11.5 percent fewer arrests over the same time period, for a total of nearly 17,000 fewer arrests so far this year.

GETTY IMAGES

The number of robberies, burglaries and grand larceny have all dropped, as have the overall number of shooting incidents, though there have been more fatal shootings, police said, which is tied to the increase in murders.

"We have exceeded historic reductions that we had achieved at this time last year," Monahan said.

Mayor Bill de Blasio commended the overall decrease in crime in New York City, but noted that there's still more work to do to make this "the safest big city in America."

Part of the effort to increase safety here comes through community policing initiatives, and to help connect community members and police officers even further, the mayor announced that the 40th Precinct will get a new station house.

Construction has already begun on the new South Bronx station house, which is set to cost $68 million and to be completed by spring of 2021. The new 42,000-square-foot building will be located at 567 East 149th Street and have a dedicated space for the community to help strengthen "the bond between neighborhood and police," officials say.

"All the people who live, work and visit here will be able to come in and be part of the police department like nowhere else in the five boroughs," NYPD Commissioner James P. O'Neill said at the news conference. "Our message to New Yorkers going forward is: 'These are your station houses.'"

N.Y. Senator Kirsten Gillibrand. GETTY IMAGES

Gillibrand slams Trump's SCOTUS pick

The New York senator tells Metro that Brett Kavanaugh's record "is really against our values in multiple ways."

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

The big news on Capitol Hill Tuesday was the unveiling of Trump's nomination for the Supreme Court, Judge Brett Kavanaugh who, if approved by the Senate, will replace Justice Anthony Kennedy.

Democrats are already lining up in opposition to the conservative judge. Metro caught up with New York Democratic Senator Kirsten Gillibrand ahead of her appearance at next weekend's OZY Fest in Central Park to get her thoughts on Trump's controversial nomination.

Trump's nomination of Brett Kavanaugh was not necessarily the pick that most people predicted that he'd choose. When this goes to a vote in the Senate, will you vote to confirm Kavanaugh to the Supreme Court?

I definitely do not support this pick and he will be someone who will undermine women's rights and gay rights. I am very concerned about his record. I am very concerned about his past statements. I will definitely be voting against. I imagine this is something that we will be talking about at the OZY Fest as well.

Do you see a firm opposition to Kavanaugh's nomination as being a strategy of your Democratic colleagues in the Senate?

I hope that all Democrats vote against him, and I hope that this is something our constituents speak out loudly and clearly about, because his record is really against our values in multiple ways. He has a terrible record for women's rights, for immigration rights. He prayed on the dissent in Roe V. Wade. He criticized Justice Roberts for upholding the health care law. I think he has a very, very toxic record and I hope that our colleagues all stand against him.

Kavanaugh has also previously voiced his belief that "we should not burden a sitting president with civil suits, criminal investigations or criminal prosecutions." So if Mueller were to find anything in his investigation, would it be safe to guess that he'd side with the Trump administration?

Right. His words about the role of the special counsel and the authority that he believes the President has are very far outside of the mainstream. I hope that this is something that my constituents across New York are paying attention to, and across the country. I hope they speak out loudly. I hope they speak strongly about why this justice is so far out of the mainstream that he should not be confirmed and create a rallying cry around the country to pressure senators to vote no.

Do you think that this vote for confirmation should be pushed back until after the midterm elections?

> "I definitely do not support this pick and he will be someone who will undermine women's rights and gay rights."
> Kirsten Gillibrand

This is the rule that Mitch McConnell created, and Mitch McConnell should have to abide by the rule he created. And further to that, women voters — particularly — should have a say in who this next justice is going to be. That next election is an opportunity for people to vote with their conscience about who they want to control the Senate and what they want the Congress to look like. And I think Mitch McConnell should apply the same rule he applied to President Obama and he should wait until after the election.

Caution, beachcombers! Dangerous jellyfish sighted on Jersey Shore

The "clinging jellyfish," a rare and dangerous species, has been spotted in Barnegat Bay.

sam.newhouse@metro.us

They may look like harmless invertebrates, but some jellyfish can hurt you — a lot. That includes the clinging jellyfish, a hydrozoan recently discovered for the first time in high numbers in Barnegat Bay.

"Most things, the pain starts to subside after a while," said Montclair State University professor Dr. Paul Bologna. "The people that have been stung by these clinging jellies, it's painful to start, but then the pain doesn't go away. It just slowly ratchets itself up, until they're like, 'I've got to go to the ER, I'm in that much pain.'"

About 40 clinging jellyfish (Gonionemus vertens) were discovered on July 9 in Tices Shoal near Island Beach State Park, a bay frequented by boaters, by Bologna and New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection research scientists working to track the origin of the attacks that hospitalized two boaters.

> "The people that have been stung by these clinging jellies, it's painful to start, but then the pain doesn't go away."
> Montclair State University professor Dr. Paul Bologna

"We navigated to the point where the guy said he got stung, and my student, the very first sweep, he pulls one up," Bologna said. "That never happens."

Two clinging jellyfish attacks were reported around Tices Shoal on boaters who had jumped off their boats into shallow water – and immediately gotten stung. One attack was on July 4, the other on July 8. Both boaters were hospitalized and treated with morphine for the excruciating pain.

"The clinging jellyfish is native to the Pacific. The first occurrence in New Jersey was in 2016. So we really don't know much about them," Bologna said, noting that most sightings were near Shrewsbury. "2018 was the first time we found them in Barnegat Bay, and we found them in really high numbers down here."

The quarter-size clinging jellyfish's tentacles are filled with stinging cells that can release potent paralysis toxins and neurotoxins, intended to incapacitate the prey they feed on.

"When you encounter them in open water, they've got tentacles that are 15 to 25 feet long, and when you try to brush them away they just get wrapped around your arms and your legs," Bologna said. "You get an active dose of the toxins going into you. It's going to kill your skin, and it leaves really nasty scarring all over you. That is when they're really dangerous."

Bologna urged members of the public who see dangerous jellyfish to report them to the New Jersey Jellyspotters Facebook group, or to email him directly with a photo and the location of the sighting at bolognap@montclair.edu.

Is it a bio-invasion?

Clinging jellyfish are believed to have appeared in the Atlantic Ocean through attaching themselves to commercial ships. The first clinging jellyfish discovered in New Jersey were DNA-matched to a variety common to the China Sea, according to a paper Bologna and fellow researchers authored on the 2016 invasion.

Other rare and dangerous jellyfish like the Portuguese man o' war (Physalia physalis), also known as the "blue bottle" or "floating terror," have been spotted in the past four years on the Jersey Shore. Believed to migrate around the globe on gusts of current, recent sightings of the man o' war have been on beaches in Lavallette, Wildwood, and Cape May County.

The man o' war, previously spotted in 2015 in Harvey Cedars Beach and in Stone Harbor, can cause extreme pain, fever, shock, lung and heart problems, and even death. But no man o' war victims have been reported yet in New Jersey.

"The little clinging jellies are the ones that are sending people to the hospital," Bologna said. "Those guys are really nasty."

IF YOU GET STUNG

- Don't pee on the wound; that is a false urban legend.

- The commercial product Sting-No-More was created to combat the pain of jellyfish stings and works against most types of jellyfish stings.

- Alternately, pour white vinegar on the injury to immobilize stinging cells.

- Rinse it off with saltwater and use that to wipe off any remaining cells on your skin.

- Depending on the level of pain, apply a hot compress, take over-the-counter painkillers, or seek medical attention.

Demand Soars At NYC Medical Clini

Can This Medical Technology Possibly Eliminate Or

The Advanced Medical Treatment Every Back & Neck Pain Sufferer Needs To Kno

NYC Pain MD is a medical clinic with two locations in New York City that has made a name for itself by treating the worst cases of back or neck pain.

Here is what every back and neck pain sufferer who has failed to respond to other treatments and does not want surgery should know about one of the best treatment options available today for severe back and neck pain including when, why and where you should consider this treatment to get maximum results.

If you suffer with back, neck or nerve pain, you have probably already tried many treatments ... especially countless pain medications.

Experienced doctors understand that even though pain medications such as anti-inflammatory pain pills are part of the recommended early treatment plan for back pain... they are rarely the answer.

In most cases they have minimal, short term results (if any) and have a laundry list of potential side effects. Some being serious and even life threatening.

Are there any better options?

Thankfully, advancements in science and technology come extremely fast. And now there is very good option to help relieve the pain.

An option that a lot of back and neck pain sufferers may have never heard of before.

Before we get into these treatments, please understand this...

NYC Pain MD is a REAL medical clinic that has treated the worst cases of back pain. Patients travel from all over to be treated at one of their clinics for all sorts of joint and muscle pain because they want the best medical treatments available.

What you are about to discover is a REAL medical treatment. Not some miracle cure you see on infomercials or on the internet.

Know this fact: There is no one treatment that will help every case of back pain. And we cannot guarantee this treatment will work for you. But this treatment has already helped countless back and neck pain sufferers who had given up hope. I bet many just like you.

What is this treatment? It's called...

Radiofrequency Neurotomy

"Radiofrequncy Neurotomy" is often referred to as RF for short. Just what is "RF".

RF is a procedure that is based on the concept that blocking the nerve supply to the painful area may alleviate pain and restore function.

There are many nerves around your spine and one of their jobs is to sense PAIN.

Radiofrequency waves are delivered to these nerves under advanced imaging to "block" the nerves and slow down the pain

Two procedures are performed. First, a test, diagnostic "Block" procedure is done to determine if the procedure is going to decrease pain and improve function.

If this first "test" procedure is successful, the Radio Frequency Neurotomy is scheduled and performed for longer term relief.

What Results Can You Expect?

Like all real medical procedures... results vary for individual patients. No good and ethical doctor would guarantee any exact results for any procedure... that's just not how things work and it would be less than honest.

That's being said, it is not uncommon for patients to get complete, if not significant relief of their pain shortly after the treatment.

How Long Do The Results Last?

This procedure "impaits" the nerves pain signals... it does not destroy them. Therefore, the results are safe but not completely permanent. But, many patients get relief for 6 months… 12 months…. 18 months for some even longer. The great news is - another procedure can be safely preformed for more relief if necessary.

While we cannot claim this is a complete "permanent cure" ... it can be a godsend for so many who were in constant pain.

Really... what would it be worth if you could get out of pain for long enough so you could start enjoying your everyday life again?

Would it be worth it to be able to finally get a good night's sleep again?

How about being able to go for a simple walk or just do your basic daily chores without worrying about so much pain?

Is It Safe?

Yes. This procedure has been done countless times and continues to have an excellent safety record. It is minimally invasive and is not surgical.

Who Should Try This Treatment?

RF should be considered after other treatments, such as anti-inflammatory pain medication and physical therapy do not offer good enough results.

RF has also been found effective AFTER back surgery when patient's still feel pain.

The pain after a failed back surgery can be debilitating for some and this procedure may be the only thing that helps give you relief.

What To Do Next If You Are In Pain And The "X" Factor

Here is the "X" factor many do not consider that might be the difference between you getting the best possible treatment or not.

Many experts suggest choosing a medical clinic that offers all these treatments and has the proper, most advanced technology all under one roof without the need for a surgical center or hospital.

‘Nobody thought we could do it’: Rescue of Thai boys accomplished

Soccer team came out of cave in good health, will stay in hospital for a week.

GETTY IMAGES

Rescuers freed the last four of 12 Thai boys and their soccer coach from deep inside a flooded cave on Tuesday, a successful end to a perilous mission that gripped the world for more than two weeks.

The “Wild Boars” soccer team, aged between 11 and 16, and their 25-year-old coach became trapped on June 23 while exploring the cave complex in the northern province of Chiang Rai when a rainy season downpour flooded the tunnels.

“We are not sure if this is a miracle, a science, or what. All the thirteen Wild Boars are now out of the cave,” the Navy SEAL unit, which led the rescue, said on its Facebook page, adding all were safe.

British divers found the 13, hungry and huddled in darkness on a muddy bank in a partly flooded chamber several kilometers inside the Tham Luang cave complex, on Monday last week.

After pondering for days how to get the 13 out, a rescue operation was launched on Sunday when four of the boys were brought out, tethered to rescue divers.

Another four were rescued on Monday and the last four boys and the coach were brought out on Tuesday, prompting rounds of spontaneous applause as ambulances and helicopters passed.

Celebrations were tinged with sadness over the loss of a former Thai navy diver who died on Friday while on a resupply mission inside the cave.

thank you so much for helping the boys survive this long," said one Chiang Rai woman wearing a traditional dress, tears brimming in her eyes.

"I remember all of their faces, especially the youngest one. He's the smallest one and he doesn't have as much experience as the others. … I felt like he was one of my own children and I wanted him to come home."

Rescuers brought out the last five on stretchers, one by one over the course of Tuesday, and they were taken by helicopter to hospital.

Chief of the rescue mission Narongsak Osottanakorn addressed reporters at the end of the 17-day mission, arriving at a media center to a round of applause.

He confirmed that a medic and all navy SEAL divers involved in the rescue mission had also left the cave safely.

"Nobody thought we could do it. It was a world first," he said. "It was Mission Possible for TeamThailand.

"The heroes this time are people all over the world," he added, referring to the multinational team that assisted in the operation.

"This mission was successful because we had power. The power of love. Everybody sent it to the 13."

"We are not sure if this is a miracle, science, or what. All the thirteen Wild Boars are now out of the cave."

Navy SEAL unit

Officials said details of the rescue operation would be revealed on Wednesday.

The eight boys brought out on Sunday and Monday were in good health overall and some asked for chocolate bread for breakfast, officials said earlier.

Two of the boys had suspected lung infections but the four boys from the first group rescued were all walking around in hospital.

Volunteers from as far away as Australia and the United States helped with the effort to rescue the boys. U.S. military personnel also helped.

President Donald Trump hailed the rescue.

"On behalf of the United States, congratulations to the Thai Navy SEALs and all on the successful rescue of the 12 boys and their coach from the treacherous cave in Thailand," Trump said on Twitter.

"Such a beautiful moment — all freed, great job!"

Authorities did not reveal the identity of the boys as they were brought out. Parents of the four boys rescued on Sunday were allowed to see them through a glass window at the hospital, public health officials said on Tuesday, but they will be quarantined for the time being.

The boys were still being quarantined from their parents because of the risk of infection and would likely be kept in hospital for a week for tests, officials said earlier.

BUTT OUT!
It's bad enough that so many people still smoke in the street polluting the air, but when they are done with their cigarettes, do they have to throw them on the street without STAMPING THEM OUT ?? I mean, they are finished smoking it..it would take two seconds to stamp out that stub so it doesn't keep smoldering and stinking up the air. Maybe a lot of smokers have bad circulation in their legs(from smoking!) and it is a hardship... or maybe they don't want to get their shoes dirty(though if they smoke they should be used to dirty clothes) Or maybe like so many of these grumbles..it's just people being selfish!

What to expect after 'The Handmaid's Tale' season 2 finale

Hulu's provocative dystopian series is coming to a close ... for now.

letters@metro.us

Following Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy's retirement announcement in early July, the already-popular comparisons between American politics and Hulu's "The Handmaid's Tale" were kicked up a notch. As Alex Zaragoza wrote for the Daily Beast, "The current season of 'The Handmaid's Tale' has been brutal. And so has America as of late."

Whether these comparisons are too far-fetched or too on-the-nose, one thing is clear: "The Handmaid's Tale" has become a pop-culture phenomenon. Even if watching it is as "masochistic" as Zaragoza claims, critics and Hulu subscribers alike can't take their eyes off of it. Which is why, as the second season concludes with "The Word," it should come as no surprise that a third season is on the way.

In May, Variety reported that Hulu had renewed the Emmy and Peabody Award-winning series for a third season. Elisabeth Moss and the other major cast members who survive the second season finale's events are all expected to return, but aside from the renewal itself, nothing is known about "The Handmaid's Tale" season three.

Considering what happened in last week's penultimate "Postpartum," however, we can make a few guesses as to what "The Word" has in store for the willing and unwilling residents of Gilead. Who knows? There might even be something there that hints at what's to come next season.

The second-to-last episode of season two ended with the execution of Nick's child bride Eden Spencer, and her lover Isaac, one of the Guardians. Though Nick and Eden forgave each other for their sleights, she and Isaac refused to renounce their sins before the community and were summarily drowned. It's not one of the most shocking images produced by "The Handmaid's Tale," but it has a surprisingly strong effect on Offred/June (Moss) and the other Handmaids.

As writer and producer Eric Tuchman told the Hollywood Reporter, witnessing Eden's death brings June and Serena Waterford (Yvonne Strahovski), the wife of the former's handler Commander Fred Waterford (Joseph Fiennes), together.

What's next for Offred and company in season 3?

"It's only Eden's execution, with both of them witnessing this horrible crime, that brings these two women together," he said. "It's such a lovely image of the two of them, these two women who are so often in that opposition, together with [June's] baby after the execution."

Viewers will have to wait until Wednesday's "The Word" to see precisely how this new dynamic between June and Serena alters the course of the entire series, but judging by Tuchman's hints here, Eden's death is going to trigger massive ramifications for "The Handmaid's Tale." Not just for season 2, but for whatever he and the other writers cook up for the guaranteed third season sometime in the next year.

"The Handmaid's Tale" season two finale streams Wednesday on Hulu. Season three will premiere sometime in 2019.

"The Handmaid's Tale" season 2 finale premieres today. ALL PHOTOS HULU

Bobcat Goldthwait brings 'Misfits & Monsters' to truTV

The acclaimed writer, director and comedian chatted about his new warped vision of the world.

PAT KING

Bobcat Goldthwait has been on a personal mission to not just march to the beat of his own drum, but to bash his drumsticks directly through its skin. He rose to worldwide acclaim with his outrageous stand up most notably punctuated by his warped vocal affectation. It's a persona he has successfully shed as he stepped away from the brick wall backdrop of the comedy club to get behind the camera in order to write and direct his own films.

In each of his projects, Goldthwait has tackled characters with complicated stories that take aim at the fabric of our society. Such films like 2012's "God Bless America" that set to dismantle the cult of celebrity in a radical way. Last year's documentary on his late great standup comedy mentor Barry Crimmins "Call Me Lucky" delved into the humanity behind one of the industry's great beating hearts and exposed the vulnerability beneath the armor of our heroes. There is no constant through-line with his films, per se. Yet they are all created with Goldthwait's slightly cracked view of the world. This is exactly what makes his new truTV satirical anthology series "Misfits & Monsters" so compelling.

Think of it like a funny version of the "Twilight Zone." Goldthwait wrote and directed all eight episodes of the new show, but had the idea for this project long before "Black Mirror" began predicting the ever-looming technological end times.

"I wanted to do this show about seven years ago and I went out and pitched it and people weren't doing anthology shows at the time," says Goldthwait. "I do believe that the success of 'Black Mirror' certainly helped me get this show on the air. But I think the show is different in it's own way.

Filming - Bobcat Goldthwait on set with Seth Green. MARK HILL/TRUTV

Bobcat Goldthwait. STEVE DIETL/TRUTV

It's kind of like saying 'anthology show' and then saying 'procedural crime drama' and there's like a million different ones with a million different tones. It doesn't bother me. In fact, I'm flattered when 'Twilight Zone' and 'Black Mirror' are brought up as comparisons… I have a lot of stories in my head and I have a lot of different genres I like to tackle. Every time I would make a movie I would do a completely different kind of genre each time out. I think that's why doing a TV show made sense."

The show jumps from genre to genre — from mockumentary and slapstick to period pieces and straight up horror. For Goldthwait, he believes that this approach is simply a matter of following his own creative valve and knack for pulling different emotions out of his viewers.

"I like the challenge in almost everything I do to see if I can have characters that usually do something that is very hard to get past," explains Goldthwait. "For example — In 'God Bless America' Joel Murray's character shoots a baby. Even though it's a fantasy, can you still empathize with this person? I'm not trying to manipulate the audience into liking characters, especially in this series, but I'm trying to see if you can empathize with the challenge of telling their stories. With how far out these stories go, I want to see if there is still something that seemed identifiable."

One of the episodes follows a presidential candidate that has to come clean to the voting public about being a werewolf. The voters chose to look past this flaw to vote a monster in to office. Sound familiar? Fortunately, Goldthwait was able to show this episode to his hero Crimmins before he succumbed to cancer last February. A strong political voice, Crimmins could be a tough critic. So, Goldthwait was nervous to show him the finished product.

"He kind of got quiet during it," remembers Goldthwait of Crimmins watching the episode. "I was like 'Oh no. He didn't like it.' But at the very end, he goes 'that was really smart.'"

"Misfits & Monsters" premieres tonight at 10pm on truTV.

Sing along with a naked choir

Bodypainting Day returns July 14 in Washington Square Park with a naked choir to promote unity and body acceptance.

EVA KIS
eva.kis@metro.us

Catch the choir in Washington Square Park this Saturday. HUMAN CONNECTIONS

GETTY IMAGES

It's not summer until the naked choir sings. Coming to Washington Square Park in July, NYC Bodypainting Day will feature a first-ever musical performance by about 60 nude women and men taking part in the annual celebration of body positivity.

Taking place Saturday, July 14, NYC Bodypainting Day will expand its art form beyond painting to a song circle "promoting acceptance of all people, regardless of race, gender and political affiliation." Spectators are invited to lend their own voices to classic songs like "Imagine" by John Lennon and "This Land is Your Land" by Woody Guthrie, with accompaniment provided by Washington Square Park pianist Colin Huggins.

You can watch the brave crew of human canvases — full nudity is legal in New York for artistic purposes — get painted from noon to 4 p.m. The naked choir performance starts at 4:15 p.m. under the Washington Square Arch.

For the event's fifth year, the theme is Movement — as in the models are moving canvases, but also "rising above the divisive politics of the day is a movement in and of itself," founder Andy Golub explains.

Accepting each other for who we are remains the goal of Bodypainting Day: "Art has the ability to break through the walls that separate us. We are not pro- or anti-Trump, pro- or anti-transgender or anything else."

After the show, models will pose for a photo shoot session at the fountain before marching through Greenwich Village to Union Square Park. They'll then take a double-decker bus over the Manhattan Bridge for a fundraising afterparty at Project Cozy (398 Broome St.) beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Events in Washington Square Park are open to the public and free to attend. Tickets to the afterparty are $75 in advance, $100 at the door. Proceeds benefit the nonprofit Human Connection Arts, which produces Bodypainting Day as well as other public art events.

Founded by artist Golub in 2014, NYC Bodypainting Day is a chance to think about all the ways we censor our bodies, whether it's clothing or Instagram filters, because we're told they're just not what's considered beautiful.

Golub is not against clothing, just how we tend to use it: as a way to hide what we see as flaws, as opposed to another way to express ourselves. "I just think it's best to not feel shame towards our bodies," he told Metro earlier this year, "because that's who we are."

Several other cities, including Philadelphia, San Francisco, Brussels and Amsterdam have all held their own Bodypainting Day. There was an even braver version of NYC Bodypainting Day in February, when naked models took over the Times Square bleachers for the first Polar Bear Paint.

How to take care of your plants

Plants at home during a prolonged absence require care. MWN

Those who have plants at home and usually travel for their vacations, especially during summer, face the problem of how to keep plants and flowers alive when there is no one at home to take care of them.

One of your options is to leave them under the care of relatives or neighbors, but for those who do not have anyone to turn to, following some care guidelines will guarantee the survival of the most sensitive plants.

Some are more delicate and when subjected to the absence of water, do not return to their original state and eventually perish.

Check these three valuable tips that can help you avoid an unpleasant surprise when you return home from your trip:

If possible collect some of your potted plants from the sunniest balconies to prevent the hot sun from punishing them in the absence of water. If the plant comes from the succulent or cacti family, there is not much need because they endure long periods of drought. Otherwise, placing them up in a cooler place will prevent the substrate from cracking and the plant from suffering.

Regarding luminosity, do not forget that plants, to produce energy and survive, perform photosynthesis and for this process to occur one of the necessary elements is light. Therefore, plants that are left in dark places will weaken and can die, depending on the period they are left without sun light. Leave indoor plants near windows or places with light incidence.

Another suggestion is irrigation. Wet abundantly and cover it with a plastic bag (that does not touch the leaves) like a greenhouse, this is good during your days of absence. You can also place a sponge at the base that will absorb the water and keep it stay hydrated. Another solution, are drippers with a timer, for those who like green technology. The equipment connects to a faucet and can be activated during the days and hours you chose. The products are for sale at nurseries and at some supermarkets.

Yanks, others in on Machado

The Orioles star shortstop is expected to be traded near the July 31 deadline.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Baltimore Orioles star Manny Machado will be on the move this summer. The Los Angeles Dodgers, New York Yankees and Milwaukee Brewers have a good chance to land him. GETTY IMAGES

As the calendar draws nearer to Major League Baseball's July 31 trade deadline, the more rumors and speculation swirl around Baltimore Orioles star shortstop Manny Machado.

With his team going nowhere —the Orioles are tied for the worst record in baseball with the Kansas City Royals — and free agency looming this winter, the 26-year-old's time in Baltimore is all but up this summer. It is unlikely that he would re-sign with the struggling O's, making it imperative for the team to get something in return for him.

Understandably so, Machado is the marquee man on the trade market this summer considering he is one of the best infielders in the game. The two-time Gold Glove winner was recently named to his fourth All-Star Game as he's batting .309 with 21 home runs and 60 RBI in his first 90 games this season. He is on pace to set career highs in all three of those offensive categories.

With the clock ticking on Machado's future and the ball seemingly in Baltimore's court, it appears as though three teams have become the frontrunners for the shortstop's services at least for the rest of the season.

The Los Angeles Dodgers could use a considerable upgrade at shortstop seeing as they've gotten little production out of Chris Taylor and Enrique Hernandez this season. In a wide-open NL West, they sit just a half-game behind the Arizona Diamondbacks for the top spot in the division.

Adding a huge bat like Machado's would immediately make Los Angeles the favorites to win the division for a sixth-consecutive year.

It could come down to the availability of the Dodgers' top-two prospects Alex Verdugo and Keibert Ruiz along with No. 8 youngster Yadier Alvarez. While it is not known as of yet if any combination of the three promising talents has been offered, it would be a lot to give up for three months of Machado before he hits free agency.

Baltimore could be attempting to persuade the Dodgers by sweetening the pot as Bob Nightengale of USA Today Sports reported that the Orioles have also discussed moving All-Star closer Zach Britton.

Across the country, as expected, the Yankees are also in on the Machado sweepstakes as Ken Rosenthal of the Athletic reported Monday night that the Bronx Bombers have "increased interest."

They have the youngsters to get a deal done with the likes of Clint Frazier, Justus Sheffield and Miguel Andujar. It would be safe to assume that Gleyber Torres would be off the table.

Machado would add even more to a New York lineup that has an embarrassment of riches. The Yankees offense is already No. 2 in the league.

The problem is that they might not have anywhere to put him. Didi Gregorius is coming off a 2017 season in which he set a Yankees franchise record for most home runs by a shortstop.

He has 15 round-trippers this year.

Even if the Yankees send Andujar to Baltimore, Machado has made it known that he does not want to move back to third base.

"I'm a shortstop. I play shortstop," Machado said (h/t Marc Carig).

That puts the team in quite a pickle with Gregorius as they would probably ask him to move to third.

But the Yankees could lose out on the dark-horse Brewers that are coming on very strong lately.

Fox Sports' Jon Morosi reports that Milwaukee is one of the most aggressive suitors for Machado and have the pieces to immediately help Baltimore.

With one of the worst pitching staffs in the league, the Brewers could offer Corbin Burnes or Luis Ortiz and an experienced Major Leaguer to provide an immediate contributor to the Orioles' slumping side. Morosi noted that the Brewers' depth has made Keon Broxton, Domingo Santana and Orlando Arcia expendable.

Umtiti's header lifts France to Final

Les Bleus come up with set-piece winner to send home Belgium's "Golden Generation."

JOE PANTORNO

Of the 158 goals scored so far at the 2018 FIFA World Cup, 67 of them have come from set pieces. The latest came off an Antoine Griezmann corner which was converted by Samuel Umtiti in the 51st minute of Tuesday's semifinal, lifting France to a 1-0 victory over Belgium.

The victory gives France its third-ever berth to a World Cup Final, which have all come since 1998. Les Bleus won the World Cup as hosts that year before losing to Italy in the 2006 Final in Germany.

For Belgium, the semifinal snide continues as it dropped its second-ever appearance in the final four. It was beaten by eventual champions Argentina in the 1986 semifinals.

It was a difficult loss for Belgium, who monopolized possession for most of the match. Yet it could not get star striker Romelu Lukaku, who had four goals in the tournament, into the mix which left much to be desired about the pressure despite Eden Hazard constantly weaving his way brilliantly through the French defense.

It was pressure that France wasn't too bothered in dealing with considering it constantly punched back on the counterattack thanks to the likes of Griezmann and the speedy 19-year-old Kylian Mbappe.

Yet France had to deal with a pair of Hazard chances that made Belgium's early attacking intentions prevalent. A 15th-minute shot rolled wide of Hugo Lloris' reach and goal before a scorching right-footed effort in the 19th minute was deflected just above the crossbar.

Belgium came close again in the 22nd minute following off a corner that fell to the feet of Toby Alderweireld. With his back turned to goal, the defender sent a left-footed shot toward Hugo Lloris' right post but the veteran French keeper was able to get his fingers on it and push it wide.

France had some glorious chances of its own, though. Mbappe managed to play a ball into Giroud in the Belgian box only for the central striker to whiff his chance and just moments later, five minutes from halftime, Benjamin Pavard was played in on the right side of the box only for his low, right-footed shot was saved by the outstretched foot of Thibaut Courtois.

Les Bleus carried that momentum into the second half as the World Cup of set pieces continued with Umtiti rising above Marouane Fellaini to place his header into the back of the Belgian net six minutes in.

Giroud had a golden chance for France's second blocked just five minutes later, which proved to be the side's last notable chance until stoppage time when a scrambling Belgium was left open for multiple counters that the French were unable to capitalize on.

In the meantime, Fellaini attempted to make up for his defensive miss on Umtiti with a dangerous header in the French box toward Lloris' goal in the 65th minute. However, the chance fizzed wide.

Axel Witsel finally forced Lloris to make his second save of the match in the 81st minute with a strong, low shot from outside the box as Belgium ramped up the pressure in the final 10 minutes.

But France would park the bus, ensuring that any sort of Belgian pressure would be met by a wave of blue jerseys. It was good enough to keep Lloris' goal safe and punch France's ticket to Moscow.

France now waits for England or Croatia

One of these Cinderella stories have to come to an end today (2 PM ET, FOX), but England and Croatia will round out semifinal play at the 2018 FIFA World Cup where one nation will punch a somewhat unlikely ticket to Sunday's Final where it will meet the winner of Belgium, France.

Its a rare appearance in the last four for both countries, which makes the all-European clash even more of a must-watch.

England has made the semifinals just twice in 14 previous tournaments, winning the World Cup in 1966 and finishing fourth in 1990.

While the country has been made synonymous with the game of soccer, it has been rather irrelevant since its semifinal appearance 28 years ago. A pair of quarterfinal appearances aren't necessarily something to write home about if you're English, but that's the best the Three Lions have mustered in the nearly three decades since losing in penalties to West Germany at Italy 1990.

Expectations were actually quite low for England entering the tournament. Gareth Southgate assembled a younger, inexperienced side when it comes to the international stage.

With an average age of approximately 26 years old, the Three Lions have leaned on the likes of Tottenham stars Harry Kane and Dele Alli, along with the 24-year-old Everton goalkeeper Jordan Pickford, who didn't make his England senior team debut until November of last year.

Kane has carried the offensive attack as he leads the Golden Boot race in Russia with six goals. Five of those came in the group stage, including a hat-trick against Panama, before tallying one in a penalty shootout win over Colombia in the Round of 16.

The shootout win over Los Cafeteros was the first such triumph for England at the World Cup after an excruciating jinx that saw it crash out of the 1990, 1998 and 2006 tournaments. Pickford proved vital in the victory, parrying away Carlos Bacca's attempt to help secure the Three Lions' advancement into the quarterfinals where it would dispose of Sweden.

Now comes a stiff test in Croatia, who needed a penalty shootout to get past Denmark in the Round of 16 and the hosts Russia in the quarterfinals.

Croatia is making its second appearance in a World Cup semifinal, its first coming in 1998 which was just seven years after gaining independence from Yugoslavia.

With one of the best midfield duos in the world with Real Madrid's Luka Modric and Barcelona's Ivan Rakitic, Croatia improbably dominated Group D which included a decisive 3-0 victory over Lionel Messi and Argentina.

Also grouped with Nigeria and Iceland, Croatia's chances of getting out of the group were fairly high. This was a team that should have defeated eventual champions Portugal in the Round of 16 at Euro 2016.

Modric is the only Croatian with multiple goals at this year's tournament (2), but the Blazers boast seven other goal scorers indicating a deep, balanced side. JOE PANTORNO
